New Assisted Living in Plainville: Redbud Estates

In cooperation with the Rooks County Commission, the Rooks County Senior Services Board approved of the final working drawings for the construction of a 12 unit assisted living for bidding by contractors. The project has now been named Redbud Estates.

The Rooks County Commission will handle the bids and award the final contracts. It is anticipated that awards for the bid could be made around July 1, 2007 with actual construction beginning soon thereafter

Redbud Estates is a joint effort between Rooks County Commission and the Rooks County Senior Services. The Rooks County Commission has committed resources to the building of this complex for the benefit of the elderly of the county. They believe that it is important to provide health and social support services for our elderly citizens.

Rooks County Senior Services, a not-for-profit corporation formed in 2006 is the operator and manager of the Estates and the nursing facility. Redbud Estates will be licensed as an Assisted Living residence specifically designed for elders who need some assistance with daily living, but do not need around the clock nursing care 24 hours. Redbud Estates will contain nearly 10,000 square feet with 12 Private or companion suites of 450 square feet complete with shower.

Additional help and care will be available for individuals following the completion of a resident assessment. This assessment helps determine the appropriate care and service that preserves each resident's dignity, encourages independence and best enables freedom of choice.
